Description:

About the Author A pioneer in the inspirational literature movement, Grace Livingston Hill was born to a family of writers and arrived on earth already primed to take her place in the literary world. A Wellsville, New York native, she was born in 1865 to Charles Montgomery Livingston, a Presbyterian minister, and his wife, Marcia Macdonald Livingston. Born the day after Abraham Lincoln died, Grace grew up in an unstable world, making her writings about redemption, strong young Christian women, and the triumph of good over evil even more inspiring, relevant, and heartening. --This text refers to the edition.
