Among the dusty treasures from his expeditions were an intricately carved cuckoo clock, a silver spoon with a handle shaped like a fish, and a tiny teapot, only as big as a thimble.

Ivy loved to examine the objects in the Wonder Room and quiz her grandfather as to where he had found them. As he sat at his desk, sharpening his pencils or examining a map, his reply was always the same. "Oh, just a little something I found on my travels," he would say with a mysterious grin. For a girl with many questions, this was a most unsatisfactory answer!

Some children enjoyed playing on swings and others preferred riding bicycles, but Ivy liked to imagine. Occasionally, though, her mind wandered a little too far, and she found herself glancing at darkened doorways or peering hesitantly beneath the bed, wondering whether a monster was lurking just out of sight.
